Good day, Ms. Constantino!

This is Regine Cabato from CNN Philippines. We are working on a long form digital feature about public school teachers. After being referred to you by the main DepEd Communications arm, I am messaging to ask for your office's assistance and recommendations in contacting noteworthy teachers who could be interviewed on the subject.

The story is set to tackle a day in the life of a public school teacher. It includes a discussion on the state of public school education at the primary and secondary levels, focusing on teachers' struggles inside and outside the classroom. The story will also tackle the proposed raise for teachers' salaries.

We are looking for about two or three teachers at the elementary and secondary levels, male, female, or LGBT, from different kinds of public schools and teaching different subjects. In line with this, we hope one of the teachers can come from a science high school. We also hope the teachers can be of varying ages, with at least one being a career educator nearing retirement age.

They can be strict or kind, but we hope the featured teachers are industrious, articulate, and passionate. We are also willing to have a video conference, phone call, or e-mail interview with a teacher from the province.

The reason we are asking for different case studies is we want to showcase the diversity of teachers, and how education is a field that attracts people from all walks of life.

The teachers can be people who have previously been recognized or rewarded by DepEd or other non-government bodies -- they can also be people who have yet to be featured or recognized for their hard work.

We are hoping that we could set a schedule for interview within the next two weeks, by February 2 (Friday). I would be glad to visit the school in question if it is near Metro Manila, and will likely bring a photographer or videographer with me. I can send a draft list of questions at your request.

Thank you, and looking forward to your reply!

Regine Cabato
